WELCOME TO APPS MAGAZINE

Your essential apps guide every issue

People spend more time on tech than they do sleeping. Over half of the average waking day is spent texting, talking, playing games, listening to music and watching videos, says a study carried out by Ofcom. That adds up to eight hours and 41 minutes, while the average night's sleep is eight hours and 21 minutes. With people using their phones more than ever, this issue is packed with the best apps to guide you through your entire day, from dawn until dusk (page 14).

If the idea of spending so much time staring at screen horrifies you, check out our guide to the leading automation apps (page 18). They will perform jobs so you don't have to, such as sharing your photos to your preferred social network or turning off the lights when you go out, freeing up your time.

The team recommends...

DAN HUTCHINSON Editor in Chief

A uniquely altruistic app, free download Be My Eyes (page 27) enables sighted users to help blind people with everyday tasks through a live video chat.

JACK PARSONS Deputy Editor

If you enjoy Timehop's daily updates of what you were doing this time last year, try Last Time (page 31). It makes it easy to reflect on your accomplishments.

DOM PEPIATT Contributor

A work of interactive art, Alto's Adventure (page 40) is the endless runner's answer to indie puzzle game Monument Valley.

OLIVER HILL Contributor

If you've invested in the Apple ecosystem and own both an iPad and a Mac computer, Alfred Remote (page 28) is a great way to combine the two.

GREAT DAYS OUT

DISCOVER FUN FOR ALL THE FAMILY WITH HOW IT WORKS' BRAND-NEW APP

Make the most of your weekends with How It Works: Great Days Out, a new app from the popular science and technology magazine for all ages. Just as How It Works magazine is both fact-filled and fun, Great Days Out is packed with family-friendly places across the UK to visit that are both educational and entertaining.

Great Days Out features live listings information from thousands of museums, galleries and heritage sites supplied by Culture24, an organisation supported by Arts Council England. The app then makes it easy to search through this huge database of thought-provoking places, either as a map that you can explore or as a curated list of places near your location. Every place featured in the app includes a detailed profile, complete with photos, a venue description, opening times and contact details. You can even get turn-by-turn directions to attraction addresses so that you can easily get to your desired location.

"If How It Works is the magazine that feeds minds then Great Days Out is an app that feeds, stimulates and excites minds through amazing first-hand experiences," said Dave Harfield, Editor in Chief of How It Works. "If you want to find unique and interesting activities for your family that are both exciting and educational then this app will provide everything you need for truly great days out, over and over again. No family should be without it."

Currently How It Works: Great Days Out is available on iPhone, however an Android version is also planned.

FAVOURITE PLACES

When you find an attraction you like, tap the star icon. You can then find it quickly and easily in a saved list of favourites - even when you're offline.

100% INDEPENDENT

Great Days Out is not affiliated with any of the attractions listed in the app, so all information is completely unbiased and covers a huge range of days out, from zoos and museums, to cathedrals and national parks.

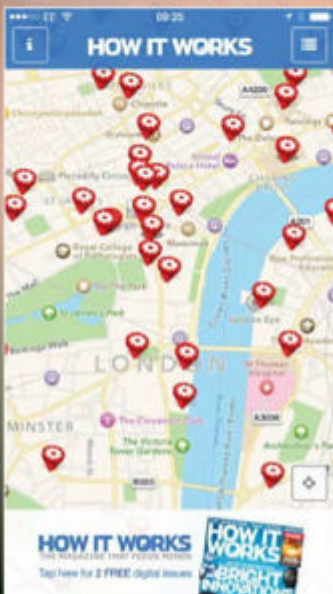

SHARE ATTRactions

If you want to tell a friend about an attraction, you can send links via SMS text message, email or post it to your favourite social networks.

REGULARLY UPDATED

Powered by live listings from Culture24, Great Days Out is constantly being updated with new attractions and events for you to do.

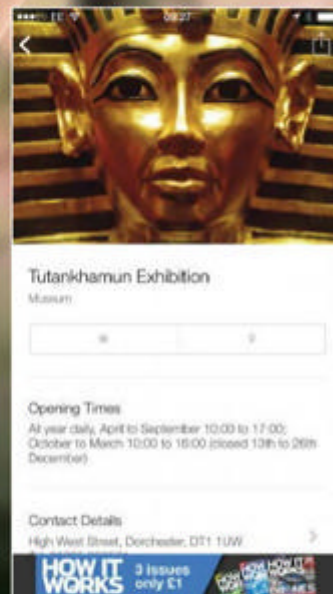

HOW IT WORKS....

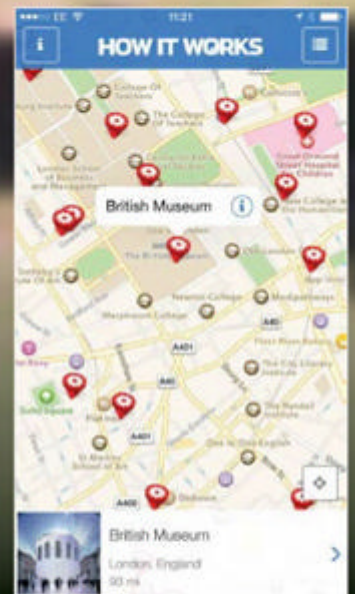

01 Look around you Explore a map to discover great days out across the UK. Zoom in and out to view towns and cities in more depth and tap the red icons to view more in-depth profiles of every attraction.

02 Local listings For quick results, you can also view a list of attraction near you, organised by how close they are. As well as including photos, the list also details each attraction's distance in miles.

03 Detailed profiles Whichever mode you use, every attraction you tap includes very useful information such as a detailed venue description, photos, opening times, ticket prices and contact information.

04 Hit the road When viewing a listing, tap on the map for a close-up look at nearby roads. You can even tap the arrow icon for turn-by-turn directions to your desired place from your current location.

BRINGING COOL TECH INTO BUSINESSES

"Organisations should harness the cool tech factor and take advantage of the apps revolution in business," says
Dan Onions, founder of DASH

DASH PROJECT & TASK MANAGEMENT

Control and complete work, not just by focusing on the goals of the project but by looking at what you need to do to achieve them.

● iPad | iOS 7.0 | Freemium | v1.2

Tech was not always cool. The fact that it became so popular has been one of the most important factors in the development of technology industry. Mobile apps mean that consumers are now driving the demand for new technology at a faster rate than businesses ever could. This is the apps revolution, but it's really just the start.

For many years computers and software were hidden inside universities and businesses, and most people were not interested and weren't exposed to it. About 25 years ago computers started coming into the home, but it was only the geeks (like me) that were into them. Technology was driven by the needs of businesses, but not for everyday consumers. Most people had not heard of an app. The apps revolution happened because we reached a tipping point where technology started getting really useful for everyone, through the internet and mobile devices. The best technologies these days are driven by consumers, because tech is cool and people want more of it.

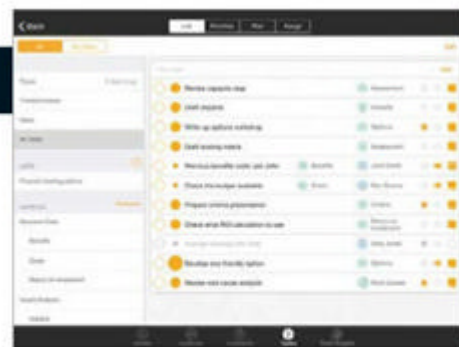

We are now in a situation where businesses are lagging behind consumers. You are more likely to get better technology in your home than in the office.

User demand is now influencing technology in organisations. A good example of this is the iPad. It's a highly intuitive device, widely loved by its millions of users and as a result, the wider tablet market took off. And because of this success, businesses took notice.

Many organisations often seem to go out of their way to be uncool, by providing older technology to employees. Businesses are very conservative in technology decisions, because buying for many people at once is a very big investment. It tends to take a long time too because many people need to agree for it to actually happen, and the decision needs to be safe and justified.

Uncool tech is seen as a safe decision, because that is the normal way. In fact, buying cool tech in the business environment arouses suspicions that it's an emotional decision.

"USER DEMAND IS NOW INFLUENCING TECHNOLOGY IN ORGANISATIONS"

Dash works at improving your thinking and goal-completion

This is a false economy. The true benefit of technology is when it fits with the needs of people - when people love something they are more motivated and productive.

The reason that people love iPads is not just because they look good, they are also stable, reliable, easy to use and light. Most of all it is the amazing apps that are developed on it, which are immediately usable without training. If businesses can harness the 'love-factor' this has big implications for increasing productivity, lowering IT training costs and encouraging business change. Businesses often struggle with reforming the way they operate.

In the case of the iPad, things are looking better. Last year, IBM and Apple announced a deal where IBM will develop iPhone and iPad apps for businesses and sell Apple hardware. IBM has a huge global sales force used to selling to businesses.

The App Store is already the biggest app platform, with plenty of business and productivity apps that are aimed at individuals, but this is just the beginning. The whole idea of apps is changing the way that people think about business software. Business IT systems tend to be highly centralised and hard to evolve. In contrast, the App Store has over a million apps created by thousands of developers all running on the same platform.

We are starting to see businesses provide their own apps for employees and customers for them to use. More importantly, businesses will create their own platforms so that data is more easily exposed for apps. This change will be the big revolution in business apps.

01 Fly the runway

Beloved by fashion editors, Style.com is part of the stylish in-crowd so make sure you make it your first port of call. Browse through the news and look for the current fashion trends, brought to your phone with clear images and solid descriptions.

02 Strike a pose

Now let's see what people are wearing away from the catwalks. Pose is a social media app which lets you select and follow bloggers, celebrities and stylists as well as brands. Take time to browse through other people's clothing listings.

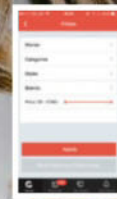

03 Study their style

When you click on a person's listing, you will see photos, each of which describe what the person is wearing. You can read the comments on the listings and leave your own feedback. It gives an idea of the current-day's street trends.

04 Expert advice

Now use ASAP54 to search for specific fashion items. Type in a brand name, search via photo and try hashtags before discovering where you can buy each outfit. Stuck? You can ask ASAP54's in-house stylists for advice within 24 hours.

05 Shopping spree

By identifying specific brands and fashion designers, you should have a good idea of your own style and the fashion available. Now it's time for a shopping spree. Download Grabble and select the filters for the clothes you like to wear.

06 Throw or grab

With Grabble, you can quickly see a range of brands from major retailers presented one after another. You can either throw an item aside or grab it. Your grabbed items are saved with each individual item available for an instant purchase.

FINAL THOUGHT

Fashion is big business so it's not surprising that there is such a strong app presence. With these apps, we've been able to check the latest fashion, see how that has transcended into everyday life, been able to search for specific brands and get lots of inspiration. It's been a very easy process.

THE ANIMAL LOVER

TOP APPS FOR PEOPLE WITH A KEEN INTEREST IN PETS AND WILDLIFE

Whether you have a pet of your own or you love seeing animals in their natural habitat, in zoos or in nature parks, you can indulge your passion with a good selection of apps. Here we look at some essential tools that will help you care for your pet as well as watch animals in all kinds of far flung locations across the world. You'll also be able to communicate with friends - no matter if they are new-found humans or simply lovable animals.

POCKET ZOO WITH LIVE ANIMALS CAMS

ALTERNATIVE TO: VIDEOS

As well as letting you see polar bears, tigers and penguins at more than ten live animal cams from zoos across the world, Pocket Zoo has over 150 wildlife videos with photos and animal sounds.

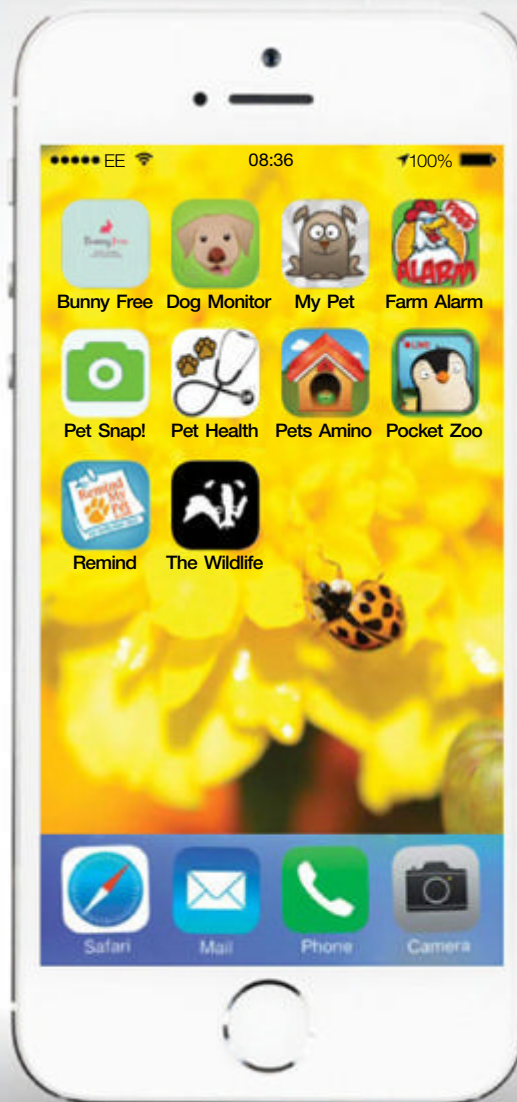

● iPhone+ | iOS 7.1 | Free | v2.3

MY PET THE ULTIMATE PET RECORD MAKER

ALTERNATIVE TO: PHOTO

MyPet is a fabulous, varied app but one of the most fun parts is a photo and video album section that lets you keep track of your animal as he or she grows up.

● iPhone | iOS 7.0 | £1.49/$1.99 | v2.5

PETS AMINO

ALTERNATIVE TO: MESSAGES

Being able to keep in touch with like-minded animal lovers is great fun. With Pets Amino you can share photos of your beloved pets, view others users pictures and comment on them.

● iPhone+ | iOS 6.0 | Free | v1.5.12
● Android | OS 4.0 | Free | v1.013

REMIND-MY-PET

ALTERNATIVE TO: REMINDERS

Aimed at reminding you when a poorly pet needs his or her medication, Remind-My-Pet lets you set up folders for each animal that you take care of. This top app then gives you the choice of one-off, daily, weekly or monthly reminders so that you never forget to give them their pills.

● iPhone+ | iOS 6.1 | Free | v1.0.2

FARM ALARM CLOCK - ANIMAL SOUNDS

ALTERNATIVE TO: CLOCK

Want to start your day the animal way? You'll certainly be alert and awake with this app. You can fall asleep to farm noises and choose from five free animal alarm sounds. Great for entertaining kids.

● iPhone+ | iOS 4.0 | Freemium | v1.4

PET SNAP!

ALTERNATIVE TO: CAMERA

It is hard to take photos of your pets - it usually entails you making lots of embarrassing funny noises to get them to look at you. Pet Snap! makes life easier by emitting attention-grabbing toy, whistles or bird sounds to grab your beloved's attention while an image is slyly being prepared.

● iPhone | iOS 6.1 | £0.79/$0.99 | v1.01

PET HEALTH (MEDICAL DIARY AND LOG)

ALTERNATIVE TO: HEALTH

It is vital to keep an eye on your animal's wellbeing. Pet Health lets you create a pet's medical record, detailing its vaccinations, conditions, allergies and important information.

● iPhone | iOS 5.0 | £0.79/$0.99 | v2.1

DOG MONITOR

ALTERNATIVE TO: FACETIME

For this to work, you need two iOS devices. When they are connected, you can leave one at home and take the other out and about with you, using the camera function to see your dog live and the microphone to talk as if you were right next to it.

● iPhone+ | iOS 5.1 | £2.99/$3.99 | v2.0.4

BUNNY FREE

ALTERNATIVE TO: SAFARI

Input the name of a company into the search engine of Bunny Free and it will tell you if the firm tests its wares on animals. You can also scan the barcodes of items for a speedier response on any product.

● iPhone | iOS 6.0 | Free | v1.0.1
● Android | OS 4.0 | Free | v1.0

THE WILDLIFE TRUSTS: NATURE FINDER

ALTERNATIVE TO: MAPS

This app is UK-only but lets you explore more than 2,000 nature reserves across 47 Wildlife Trusts showing all of the wildlife in each location with a handy map and events.

● iPhone | iOS 6.1 | Free | v1.1

"PET HEALTH LETS YOU CREATE A PET'S MEDICAL RECORD, DETAILING ITS VACCINATIONS AND IMPORTANT INFORMATION"

GEAR ROUNDUP

PRONTO PEEL

Pronto turns your Bluetooth signal into infrared signals, enabling you to use your iPhone as a remote control. By then using the accompanying free Peel Smart Remote app, and connecting to the portable unit, you can use Pronto as your very own TV guide, as well as a social media platform to share details about your favourite programmes and movies. As a remote control, performance is decidedly mixed and it's often a bit of a struggle to see if your TV works with the product.

SEAGATE WIRELESS PLUS

Wireless storage drives are in abundance, but Seagate's Wireless Plus is one of the few to include a staggering 2TB of storage to use. After a rather long set-up process via Wi-Fi, actually using the drive to transfer and use files is simple enough. Despite the storage size it includes, the drive is fairly lightweight, but noticeably thicker than similar wireless drive on the market. It's also very expensive and you can get similar drives, albeit from a lesser name, at around half the cost. However, Seagate's offering gets the job done well enough for us to recommend it.

ZEPP GOLF

Golf is a hard sport to master, so getting any help you can is key. The Zepp Golf is a small, lightweight sensor that attaches to your glove and monitors your swing. Through the official app, users can then analyse the problems with their swing and get recommendations on how to change it. To take it a step further, there's a full 3D mode to locate poor body posture. As an analytical system, there's simply nothing really like it on the market, but the price will alienate some of the more casual golfers.

£129.99/$149.99 | Zepp | www.zepp.com

RHA T10 HEADPHONES

RHA's superb pedigree when it comes to producing quality in-ear headphones continues well with the T10s. The first thing you'll notice is the svelte figure the headphones cut when in use and while there's some length with the audio cable, it isn't overly long. Both bass and treble work in harmony no matter what song you're playing and the headphones seem to cope with pretty much anything we streamed through them. For a top-quality sound experience, the T10 headphones are certainly worth considering.

MORNING

Add 'habits' to your to-do list to organise your morning routine

HABITCLOCK 06:15

Is your morning routine a whirlwind of frantic activity as you run around like a headless chicken trying to do everything before you leave for work? HabitClock breaks your routine up into bite-size chunks to help you organise and manage it better. To get started, you add 'habits' – such as brush teeth, make coffee and walk the dog – to a to-do list. To make the process easier, popular habits and ready-made lists are available in the Trends section, or you can create your own custom ones.

After turning off the in-app alarm in the morning, a timer begins for the first item on the list until you've completed it and checked it off. You then move onto the next item, although you can always skip it to send it to the end of the list, thereby changing the order. You can also share your morning routine with others and see theirs for inspiration.

While the app is free to use, a premium subscription (£1.49/$1.99 per month) adds detailed reports on your habits, so you can analyse your performance and see what you need to change to perfect it.

CUT THE ROPE 2

Take some time out with this quick game - so long as the boss isn't looking! Cut the Rope 2 is one of the best casual games and as in the original, you need to cut ropes to drop candy into Om Nom's mouth, but this time you can use his friends' special abilities, such as long tongues and springy heads. It's a compulsive challenge.

“Blinkist delivers books in bite-size”

BLINKIST

Keen to learn about new ideas from business books and other non-fiction publications, but don't have the time to wade through a load of weighty tomes? Blinkist takes their key insights and delivers them in bite-size chunks that take mere minutes to peruse. Tapping one of the 500+ titles in its library presents some general info about the book, its author and target readership, plus a list of key insights - just tap one to read more about it. The reading interface is nice and clean and features options to change the font size and share what you've learnt with Blinkist-using colleagues.

Blinkist's impressive library is helpfully arranged into categories, which range from obvious business-related ones, such as Management & Leadership and Human Resources to genres like Science and Health & Fitness, so there should be something of interest to everyone.

As a premium subscription service, Blinkist costs from £3.99/$4.99 per month (or £34.99/$49.99 per year), but you can sign up for a free, no obligation three-day trial to see how it works for you.

BEAMLY 19:45

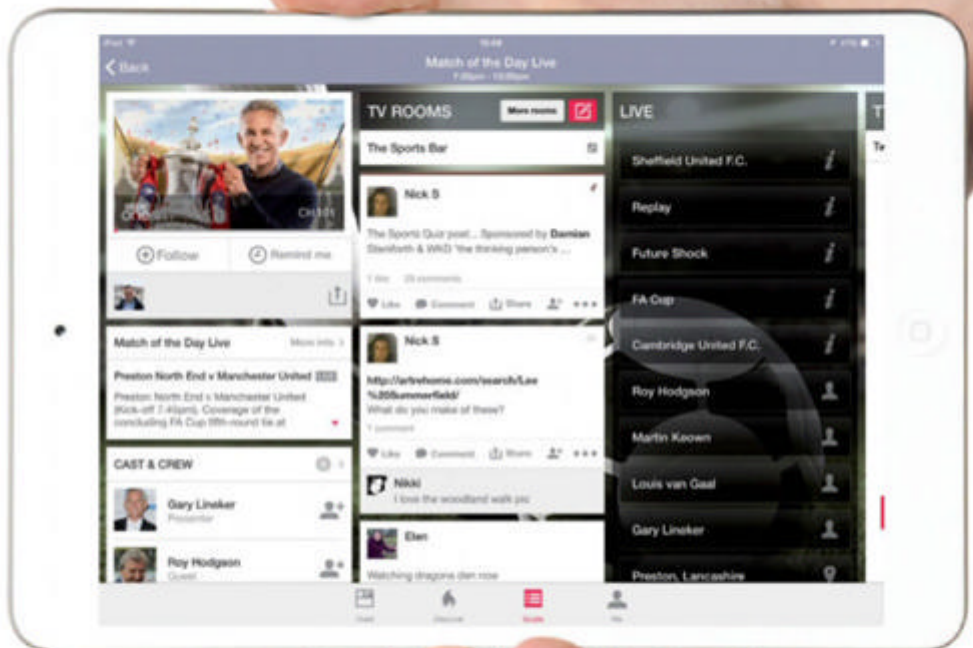

Slumping on the sofa to watch some television is always a good way to chill out, but it's a lot more fun with Beamy.

This second-screen TV app offers a host of official and user-created chat rooms to discuss what's happening in shows in real-time with other viewers. As well as for popular soaps and dramas, it works particularly well for major live sporting and entertainment events, such as the latest big football match or the Eurovision Song Contest. With the ability to follow other users, it's like a social network for avid TV viewers.

Part of this involves you following your favourite shows and stars, Twitter-style, so that you then receive personalised news stories and social feeds. When you set a reminder for a particular show, you can also share it on Beamy, Facebook and Twitter to arrange a communal viewing session. There's also a TV guide to help you plan your viewing and ensure you never miss your favourite show.

IF BY IFTTT

When you think of automation, one app stands head and shoulders above the rest. IFTTT enables you to create powerful connections with one straightforward statement. Recently the service has split into several apps, with Do Camera and Do Note specialising in particular phone features, however IF works much the same as the original all-in-one app. You define a trigger (a new photo or a bookmark for example) and an action (like saving to Dropbox or adding to Pocket) to create a 'recipe'. It's essentially a building platform to automate some of your most popular digital tasks and make the internet work just how you want.

Coupled with thousands of community-made, prebuilt automation recipes, there's plenty of third-party action too, including an iOS location channel that seamlessly integrates with Foursquare, Twitter, Instagram and Facebook. This gives users the power to, for example, send a DM to a friend when you arrive at your travel destination. IF also works with a range of smart accessories, including the Nest thermostat and Philips Hue lightbulbs.

SHAZAM

In the language of this app, to 'Shazam' something is to identify music from radio, TV and other sources by playing a short segment into your device's microphone. The app then analyses the content and fires back - usually within seconds - the title and links that enable you to preview a longer segment, buy the track from iTunes, Amazon or Google Play (depending on whether you're on iOS or Android) and instantly stream it using Rdio and Spotify. If you log in using Facebook, you can see songs that your friends have searched for and share your Shazams as well. This app will also give you a sense of what people are listening to across the world via a map. When you browse the map you will see Shazam lists from numerous countries and charts that show what is trending locally and globally. One of the best features, though, is 'Auto Shazam'. This setting in the iOS version keeps the app running in the background so that when you have your phone in your pocket at a club or next to your radio or television, you can automatically detect the titles of songs that catch your ear.

Above Entertainment pushes a young agenda with celebrity and style blogs

BLOGLOVIN'

READ THE LATEST BLOGS AND DISCOVER NEW CONTENT

PROS/CONS

- ▲ A beautiful, clean design putting content first
- ▲ You can embark on a voyage of discovery
- ▼ The categories presented to you may not suit your needs
- ▼ You cannot simply input all of your favourite blogs

B' When Google Reader was axed - a casualty of one of the search engine giant's more controversial cuts - numerous apps attempted to fill the void. Bloglovin' was one of them, an offering that relied more on discovery than on letting you input your own RSS feeds. That aspect still remains, but the app now looks better than ever thanks to a smart refresh and the addition of a new feature called Collections.

It makes a big difference. One of the fundamental aspects of Bloglovin' has been its ability to let you browse and save pages but this would give you a mass of disjointed articles. Collections enables you to put those pieces into folders, letting you build your own library of interesting reads and ensuring they are well-categorised too.

The main issue, though, is that the categories recommended by Bloglovin' will not be to everyone's taste. Clicking on Popular, for instance, shows the app's true intention: it has a tab for Categories and one specifically for Fashion. There is no doubt that this is an app for people who are primarily into art, beauty, design, fashion, lifestyle, food and drink. If you are into technology, gaming, sci-fi and so on, you have to do some extra digging via the search function and hope that the blog you enjoy reading is there.

Get into the app and find those feeds, however, and the experience is a rewarding one. The clean interface with its well-defined sections running along the bottom make light work of reading through your own feed while letting you find what is most popular and read your notifications. Each article fits well within the browser they can be saved and shared via social media. For those who do not want all of the finicky aspects often associated with readers, it's perfect.

Smart, straight-forward and with content at the forefront, if you match its demographic you'll love it.

VIMO - VIDEO + MOTION STICKER

STICK STICKERS ON YOUR VIDEOS AND GET NOTICED

There are loads of stickers to choose from in various categories, and can be coloured to suit

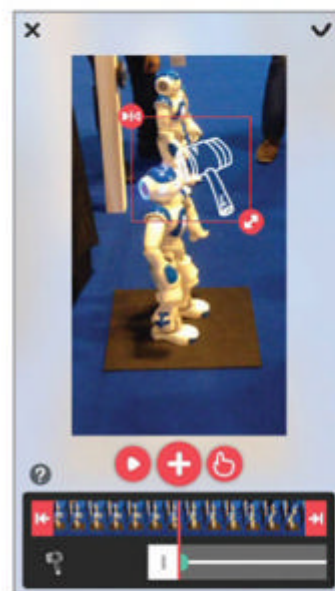

Many app developers want a slice of the social media market and it would appear that those behind Vimo are no exception. They have produced an app which enables users to add fun stickers to their videos before sharing them via Facebook, Instagram, YouTube and Vimeo. The unique selling point is that Vimo's stickers can move in line with the videos.

Users are able to place stickers over the top of any previously saved or freshly taken video, with the ability to select a specific point within the film. You can have up to two stickers at any one time for free. If you want to have more than two at once, or if you would like an expanded set of stickers, then you need to start splashing the cash on in-app purchases.

Once the stickers are in place and rotated and resized to suit, there is a function which lets the video play while the sticker is being manipulated. A fresh video is then recorded, ready for sharing, but it can also be edited if it is not quite right.

What makes this app stand out is its straightforward, intuitive interface, which Left Stickers can be resized and rotated. The timeline makes it clear where it will be placed produces stunning cartoon-like effects in next to no time. The only downside is that it is perhaps too easy to use and that we can see many a news feed may end up being clogged with the resulting efforts, and thus lessening the app's impact.

A playful video sticker app with a twist, Vimo will brighten up and energise even the duller of videos.

ACAST

THE PODCAST STREAMER THAT ALSO OFFERS EYE-CATCHING EXTRAS

Podcasts are as popular today as they have ever been, thanks to Serial which has not only broadcast compelling true crime story but accompanied it with a website packed with maps and documents that bring its story to life.

Left What's New and Popular sections help you to discover content

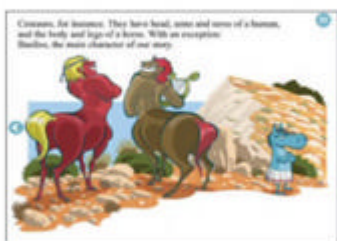

Acast takes a similar approach to podcasting by enhancing the listening experience with what it calls "bling". As you listen, the app calls up images, links and videos relating to what is being said, alerting you to on-screen content via a little 'pop' noise. As you engage with the content, the podcast continues to play in the background, the idea being that the experience becomes multidimensional.

In principle, it is a great idea but a big problem is that the content isn't always as compelling as it perhaps should be. There are some awful low-res images and links which underwhelm. This is a shame because otherwise the app is solid, slick and good-looking. It's a great way to find new podcasts, it lets you continue where you left off, updates on the podcasts you follow and incorporates a sleep timer for those late-night nod-off sessions. As podcast producers get to grips with the possibilities, though, Acast will surely be a serious contender.

Acast* wants to revolutionise podcasting and it succeeds to a point, it just needs more time to settle.

BASILEO

Greek mythology is hardly a topic that you would associate with children, but Basileo by developer MakeltApp somehow manages to explain, what are often, quite bizarre concepts in a way that even young children will understand. The discovery mode is excellent and so is the ability to read reviews of movies from friends, and if it becomes popular it will be even more useful. It's early days for the app, but it is already looking very good.

The idea is good, particularly for those of you who lead busy lives, but there are shortcomings. You need to have a premium Instapaper account for a start and the interface is not necessarily as pleasing as the services it curates content from. It works, but it does feel a little shallow throughout.

THE BEST MONEY TRANSFER APPS

GET YOUR CASH FROM ONE PLACE TO ANOTHER WITH MINIMUM FUSS

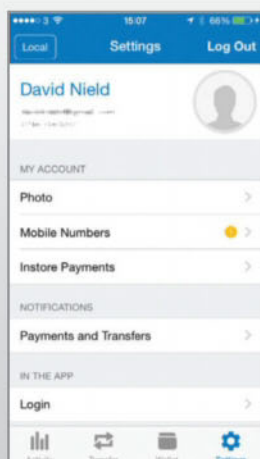

SQUARE CASH

 Square Cash is only available in the US right now – so if you're anywhere else you're out of luck. However the app is gaining enough momentum to be worth looking out for no matter where you live in the world. The beauty of the app lies in its simplicity and the ease with which you can transfer money, safely and securely once you have linked your debit card.

Only available in the US right now but is an up-and-coming star.

TRANSFERWISE MONEY TRANSFER

 From a team of ex-Skype developers, Transferwise Money Transfer takes a 0.5 per cent cut of any cross-border transaction you make – but you'll find that's probably a lot cheaper than the tax levied by your bank. Setup is simple, the menus are clear and straightforward, and you can even earn money by recommending it to friends.

If you need to send money to a foreign country then this is one of the best ways to do it.

BARCLAYS PINGIT

 You don't have to bank with Barclays to use its tidy-looking app – you just need a mobile phone number which will act as your identity. Setting a connection to your bank account isn't too difficult either (Barclays deposits a penny with a special code to prove that it's actually yours) and then you can send money to friends, buy gifts, pay bills and more.

Whether or not you're actually a Barclays customer, Pingit is smooth and intuitive for everyday banking transfers.

WORLDREMIT

 Particularly suitable for sending money between countries, the WorldRemit app takes a small percentage of the transfer amount as a fee – don't be put off thought as this is much less than many comparable services.

It's quick to get up and running, simple to use, and carefully secured, so just about everything you could ask for from a mobile payments app on your device.

Use credit or debit cards or your bank to send money to other countries cheaply.

BE MY EYES

THE SIGHTED LEADING THE WAY FOR THE BLIND

PROS/CONS

- ▲ Great idea underpinning the app
- ▲ Smooth sign-up process only takes minutes
- ▼ Seems to be a long time between calls
- ▼ App is too simple and uninformative

The idea behind Be My Eyes is a simple one. If you're blind, you can get help from a sighted volunteer over your smartphone; if you're one of those volunteers, you can donate as much or as little of your time as you like and wait until someone needs assistance.

That assistance could be anything from identifying what's in a tin of food to guiding someone through a department store. When you lend your eyes to someone in need, a live video connection is established, and you take it from there – as you help more and more people, you can build up points and your Be My Eyes reputation.

The only problem is, we have no idea if it works in practice. Despite spending a week with the app, we were never called upon to help anyone out, and if you read through the reviews that have been left for Be My Eyes, it seems to be a common problem.

The app's real-time statistics say 15,300 blind users and 155,000 sighted users have registered, and help has been given 50,500 times through the service – so someone somewhere must be making use of it. It's possible that there's a hardcore of very active sighted users with high ratings who the app turns to first.

We can't therefore comment on the quality of the video connection or the ease with which you can assist someone else (or indeed get assistance), but the premise is sound.

On the downside, the app is sparse and intimidating. There's no indication if you're likely to be called any time soon, but if you are asked to give assistance then there's no obligation to do so – if you're busy the app will just move on.

Be My Eyes is a great idea, and with some tidying up of the app it has a chance to make a real difference.

A great idea in theory and people are making use of it, but we're just not sure about how Be My Eyes actually works in practice.

Unless you're already using a pumped up version Alfred, you're just not going to get your money's worth right now. We're sure the folks over at Running With will improve Alfred Remote in the future, but until then, hang tight to the current iteration.

- ▼ To make the most of Alfred Remote users will need to spend $17 on a power pack

That's not me trying to find a snarky way to poke fun at Running With's new app, it's just that, upon closer inspection, it's hard to ignore the fact that while Alfred Remote is a functional piece of software, it doesn't really do all that much.

Sure, it lets you launch apps with a single touch, giving you the ability to open files, folders, websites without ever using your mouse. Yes it also puts a bevy of system commands at your fingertips giving you some control and meaning that you can, among other things, lock, restart, and shut down your device even if you're not in the same room as your trusty Mac.

But honestly though, once you start using Alfred Remote you'll soon realise that it actually takes longer to do those things remotely: a pretty incredulous flaw considering the app is designed to be a time-saver.

Now, Alfred 2 users who've installed the power pack might point out that Alfred Remote also enables you to control iTunes, run user-defined scrips, and connect to workflows. True, it does indeed do all of those things, but it

HYDRA – AMAZING PHOTOGRAPHY

BOOST YOUR CAMERA'S RESOLUTION UP TO 32 MEGAPIXELS

Hydra's big claim is that it can produce images which are four times the resolution of the iPhone or iPad's eight-megapixel sensor. This means it should be able to boast a high resolution of up to 32-megapixels. It does this, the developer says, by merging up to 60 individual images into a single picture, drawing in extra light.

In reality, those claims are not far off. The app has numerous modes, from HDR to lo-light, zoom and hi-res. The high resolution images will give you the finest detail, but the other modes will get you around other issues ranging from a lack of light (amplifying it ten times) to ineffective zooming (scaling two or four times the standard). HDR images, in particular, look amazing and, if you have an iPhone 6 or 6 Plus, you can take advantage of Video HDR.

As you'd expect, taking images is as straightforward as choosing a mode before pointing and clicking although there are some quality settings you can fiddle with such as choosing resolutions. But while the app appears to cope admirably when there is no motion, as soon as something moves, problems creep in. Images can start to look sludgy and poor when compared to the built-in app. In low-light, however, it truly excels, bringing fine detail into the spotlight.

Above The app will snap many times to get a perfect hi-res shot

Doesn't work well for kinetic action shots, but snap a still image in low light and you'll certainly be astonished by the results.

WHERE CHEFS EAT

RICH TASTE IN FOOD? YOU MAY NEED A BIGGER WALLET

There are two main choices when it comes to eating out: the familiarity of a chain restaurant or somewhere rather more unique, whether it's a hole in the wall or an eatery backed by a recognisable chef. Where Chefs Eat serves up the latter, with recommendations from more than 600 leading cooks.

Although it's an expensive app which caters for the very best (read, costly) restaurants there is no doubt it is easy to use. The main page is split into three main sections: Where, Chefs and Eat. Where allows for a manual search, letting you narrow locations down to city. Chefs gives a bio of each food expert and a list of their eateries, and Eat lists every recommendation in alphabetical order. The app can also use your location for faster results.

The results can be filtered according to region, cuisine type, price and the highly tipped, and you can view restaurants according to the kind of meal you want (from breakfast to high end, to the most quirky). When you find a restaurant, you get full details including whether credit cards can be used, a phone number and the opening hours. These can be shared via social media, SMS or email. The reviews could do with being longer than a few words but this is an app to savour.

Expensive and high-end, Where Chefs Eat is nevertheless a great pocket resource for a special culinary treat.

RUNBIT

GET FIT WHILE CHASING STARS

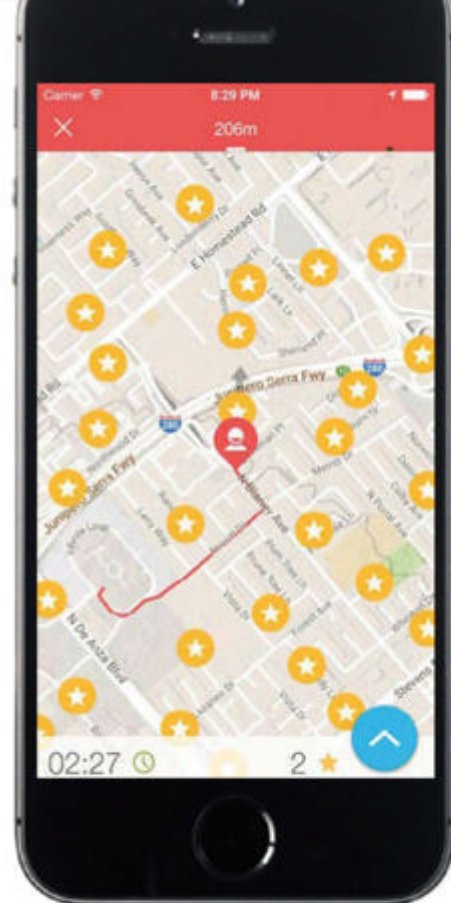

There are plenty of fitness apps on the market nowadays but Runbit offers something different. Rather than focusing on calories and performance, Runbit takes you back to a simpler time when exercise was actually fun. There is no drawn out registration process so it's a great training tool for newbies and running experts alike. Once you are ready to head out for a cycle, run or stroll, the app generates stars on a map in your vicinity. It is then up to you to take your preferred route, with elapsed activity times too of course, in your quest to collect as many stars as possible – think real-life Super Mario Brothers without the need to take down your enemies (unless you are that way inclined).

The easy-to-use app is a great option for anyone who is struggling for motivation to get exercising or looking for a change and wanting to vary their usual exercise routes. Although, the app is better suited to walking as the need to check the map regularly for stars can slow you down and be a bit of a nuisance when you are running or just moving at speed in other forms of physical activities.

Above Explore new routes and collect stars

Records of your star-hunting forays cannot be shared with friends, which is disappointing as the social aspect of these apps is often what ensures their longevity. However, Runbit isn't claiming to be an all-conquering app for all of your fitness needs and it succeeds in providing some light-relief from the daily exercise grind.

LAST TIME

RECALL THOSE IMPORTANT EVERYDAY EVENTS

When was the last time you called your mum? When did you last get some exercise? These nagging questions can be answered by Last Time - Track Your Important Events. The app's intuitive interface provides a platform to make a list of everyday tasks that slip your mind and it could prove to be a great ally (or your worst enemy) when your partner asks when you last bought them flowers...

A handy tutorial provides a grasp of the basics once you have installed the app, and from there you can take note of whatever life events you see fit to record. The app can be customised with pictures to make it easier on the eye, while you can view your list in terms of categories of items or simply alphabetically. A history of each task is recorded and the app is able to predict when you will next need to complete that task. Rather than nag you to get back on the exercise bike or to call your mum, the app informs you how long has passed since you last did those things. It can even be a handy tool for those of us who need to stop or quit something, like smoking.

QUEST

NEED AN INCENTIVE TO GET A JOB DONE? IT'S GAME ON...

PROS/CONS

- ▲ The 8-bit styling is authentic and fun
- ▲ The reminder features are particularly strong.
- ▼ You have to get your spellings spot on
- ▼ It could be a little embarrassing to use at work

Let's be honest here: completing tasks is boring. Those lists we create for ourselves fill us with dread and the reminders we receive grate us. But Quest: Tasks, Reminders & To Do List compels us to actually want us do these things. By gamifying task management in such a fun and obvious manner, there is a great sense of accomplishment. This is not just about ticking off to-dos, it's about completing quests, collecting things and levelling up – it looks great too.

The app centres around a series of 8-bit computer characters. As you pull down on the screen to create a new task, one of these creatures appears to the right of the entry box. When you later swipe right on the task to indicate that you have completed it, the main avatar charges in and the creature is turned into a collectible. By tapping on these, you eventually complete a quest and this enables you to grab a new item for your character, adding shields, helmets, swords, armour and more. Not only is this a reward for your efforts but you actually end up wanting to complete more tasks in order to get more goodies.

Ensuring this is no mere gimmick app, Quest also has powerful reminders. You can set one for a specific date and then ask for it to be repeated daily, weekly, monthly or yearly. The app can also set alerts so you could have an alarm go off for as long as 30 minutes before the alarm time or as short as five. You can see what tasks await you that day using the Today widget in the Notification centre too.

It's not perfect. There is no autocorrect so spellings have to be spot on and, once a task is completed, there is no quick way of delving into the Completed Tasks to resurrect it. But to accomplish something so polished and so cute as this app has been applauded. It has a strong future ahead.

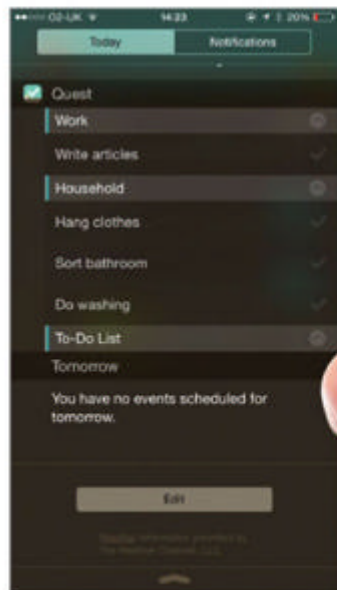

A nerdy task management app that works so well that we actually got our jobs done when we needed to do them.

HOW MUCH IS THAT CROISSANT IN THE WINDOW?

It is important to get a grasp on how much you are spending when you are abroad, just as it is crucial to understand the current rates when you are buying from a website or app that lists prices in a foreign currency. With Currenci, the job of conversion is made as simple as it ever could. You input the amount of money you are looking to convert and it instantly gives you an answer.

The app defaults to British sterling, US dollars and European euros but, with a push up on the screen, you can add many more. The exchange rates are obtained automatically (and will refresh with a pull down) so you don't have to mess around with conversion details. The downside to this is that the results may not necessarily be the exchange rate you receive in reality but as a guide, it is very effective and this has to be in kept mind when using it.

The app also has a widget. By pulling down to call up the Notification centre, the app is re-created using the top two currencies in your list and you can input an amount for an instant conversion. Should you wish to alter the

THE HIT LIST

BE MORE PRODUCTIVE WITH LISTS WITHIN LISTS

The iPhone and iPad already have a great task manager called Reminders but this fact hasn't deterred many other similar apps from competing for user attention. When you look at apps such as The Hit List, which has proven to be an elegant task management program on the Mac, you see this is no bad thing at all.

The best thing about The Hit List is that it takes very little learning, eschewing any need for complex tutorials. There is a button at the bottom of the screen that lets you quickly add a new task to your inbox and there is another towards the top for the speedy creation of new lists and folders. Each task can be broken down into subtasks and, by creating folders, they can be well organised. Even better, not only can you set a due date (although, sadly, not a time) you can ensure tasks are done that day or put off until tomorrow or next week with a simple slide to the left.

As a result, you can also see at a glance how many tasks are waiting for your attention, those which need to be done that day and the number that are upcoming. Tasks can be tagged and quickly filtered via the search bar. Each task is assigned a check box, the ticking of which marks completion, and tasks can be tagged and quickly filtered via the search bar.

With a cool, iOS 8 aesthetic and a Mac app syncing feature, this task manager really is a hit.

It does work well and will be perfect for a select group of people to collaborate on projects, but it is not easy to set up and at times the interface doesn't feel as logical as it could be. A few changes are needed.

A possible solution to conference call hell, but it is quite tricky to set up.

TALLY 2

Keeping tallies – it sounds like something you would do in the as a child, but there are many benefits that come from making the effort to count all of your everyday important activities. Whether you need to track employees or count specific work-based events, you can keep track in a second through the included today widget or in the Tally 2 - Quick Counter app itself. Your tallies are shown in a list and all you need to do to increase the total is tap the screen. You can even integrate it with other apps. It's as simple as it sounds.

Ideal for those who need to keep multiple tallies while you are busy, this is perfect for you.

COMMITTO3

CommitTo3 is a clever app which pushes you and your co-workers to commit to completing just 3 tasks a day. You can check off what you have done in real-time and also see the progress of your colleagues, and the end result should be much more focused productivity and quicker resolution of tasks. We love the simple environment in which everyone can work and especially the idea behind it. You will need to subscribe though.

When groups of people commit to three tasks a day, a lot of work will get done.

WANTS AND NEEDS

Keeping track of aspirational items is not easy and we tend to focus on individual tasks because of this. However, Wants and Needs gives you a way to easily note down what you want, what you need and what you should be thankful for. It is easy to get bogged down by material things, but with this app you can start to understand what is really important and it works perfectly. The simplicity of the system is ideal for this task and we have to recommend it highly.

A beautiful way to track the important things in your life.

CALCBOT

Calcbot used to be revered as one of the best mobile calculators you could buy, but a lack of development meant that it lost some of its appeal. The latest update, however, refreshes the calculator for 2015 and we now have a beautifully presented tool which will help you in a variety of ways. From seeing all of your calculations to scientific functions and creating favourite ones, it is now an intelligent app (with a simple expression to personalise the otherwise dry calculating no less) that anyone can benefit from every single day.

A great tool, with multiple functions and simple interface.

Saver 2 is an update on an app which was positively received, but which had fallen back in terms of design and functionality. You now get a professional interface in which to manage your finances and more than enough features to keep track of income, outgoings and savings. Throw in budgets, Touch ID support, and colourful and clear charting, and you should be able to cover just about everything that you want. The only downside is the inclusion of subscription charges for features which should be included in the free version.

A highly competent app will should help you to reach your financial goals.

RADIATION ISLAND

VENTURE OFF THE BEATEN SURVIVAL PATH

PROS/CONS

- ▲ The most ambitious mobile survival sim out there
- ▲ You're getting over £10 worth of game
- ▼ It has the age-old gaming problem with touch controls
- ▼ If you're not paying attention for the first four hours, you'll be totally lost

The scope of Radiation Island's ambition shouldn't be overlooked – the game tries so hard to be more than the sum of its parts; a survival adventure that feels like it should be sat on a desktop PC, rather than a tablet. It's a full on survival sim – an attempt at replicating the success of the genre fathers DayZ and H1Z1 on a mobile device.

And it does it well. Think Minecraft, but with a more mature edge and none of the blockiness. Instead, Radiation Island pushes the iPad to its limit with 'realistic' graphics (well, as realistic as they can be) and a control scheme that – honestly – is much better realised when you play with a gamepad. Don't worry, though: the game supports all major brands. The touch interface is just a little too complex for the casual player, and often brings you out of the world when you're fiddling around, attempting to pick up things. In a genre that's all about immersion, it's a killer flaw.

Once you've figured out how to navigate the post-apocalyptic island, you're given two main tasks: survival, and disabling Tesla towers scattered across the land. Don't worry about dying (because you will, a lot) – it's all part of the game's narrative. There's a well-paced drip-feed of story beats scattered throughout the game, and the learning curve regarding crafting and survival elements is steep, but not unwieldy. You're going to want to make sure you understand everything completely before you jump into the game's multiplayer side, though: it's brutal out there.

If you're going to drop £2.29 on anything this year, Radiation Island makes the most sense – the story alone will take you days to get through, and the open-world sandbox elements will keep you playing for weeks after. Oh, and there are no in-app purchases at all so that's refreshing.

Held back only by some awkward controls, Radiation Island is stupendously ambitious and is also incredible value for money.

MIDNIGHT STAR

A SHINING STAR, OR A SUPERMASSIVE BLACK HOLE?

PROS/CONS

- ▲ Impressive visuals
- Midnight Star is a testament to the growing power of mobile devices
- ▲ Wealth of customisation options, players can upgrade weapons, abilities, and armour
- ▼ Clunky user interface
- it's so busy that might actually confuse some players
- ▼ IAPs that are frustrating and make upgrading weapons a lethargic task

If you're a game developer looking to commit creative suicide, you need to try and create a FPS on mobile. Why? Because despite being one of the most popular genres on other platforms, first person shooters rarely work on our small screen counterparts for one reason alone: controls.

Indeed, tight, responsive controls are an essential part of any great FPS, and unfortunately for us, the one dimensional nature of touch screens means its near impossible to bring them to mobile. Seriously, no one has ever really nailed shooter controls on the platform, and at this point it looks like no one ever will.

It's a fact that means there's a sense of inevitable mediocrity surrounding Industrial Toy's sci-fi bullet-fest, Midnight Star, and although we hate to be the bearer of bad news, we're obliged to tell you that this is another mobile shooter that fails to live up to the hype.

An 'epic' tale set 120 years in the future, Midnight Star tasks players with stopping a strange alien species from destroying humanity and life as we know it. Stepping into the shoes of the perpetually quizzical 2nd Lt. Charles Campbell, gamers will swipe, tap, and pinch their way through a story that's every bit as generic as it sounds.

It's a shame, because although the gameplay - a limited take on the FPS that combines on-the-rails movement with tap-to-shoot and manual reload mechanics - is average at best, it's hard to shake the feeling that there's a good game hidden behind the bland story, confusing UI, and frustrating F2P mechanics, which make upgrading weapons, one of the game's biggest features, largely redundant.

Ultimately, it's a disappointing situation - unless you're a die-hard FPS fan who's burnt through every game that app stores have to offer, you should just sit this one out.

A flawed effort that will only interest the most dedicated FPS fans.

ODD BOT OUT

AN ODDLY BRILLIANT PLATFORMER

As a reader, you probably start every review with three questions firmly in mind: what's the game, what are its pros and cons, and should you buy it? Well, it's called Odd Bot Out, it's damn near perfect, and yes, you need this game more than life itself.

A neat, concise platformer, with more than a hint of console classics Little Big Planet and Portal, Odd Bot Out is an endearing, rewarding, and thoroughly entertaining effort from lone wolf developer Martin Magni detailing the struggles of the robot Odd as he tries to escape the robot factory.

The game features 100 bite-sized levels, perfect for gaming on-the-go, an adorable leading man – er, bot – and instinctual, one-touch controls that ensure frustration is a thing of the past. Magni's sophomore title a triumph.

In case you've somehow missed the point, let's hammer it home: Odd Bot Out is by far one of the best games on mobile right now. It's cheaper than a cup of coffee, and it'll last a hell of a lot longer. Why aren't you playing it already?

DICTATOR: OUTBREAK

YOU WON'T FOOL THE CHILDREN OF THE REVOLUTION

There's something rather disturbing about Tigrido's Dictator: Outbreak, and despite what you might think, it isn't the fascist conundrums the game throws at you after every lovingly produced ad-break.

No, what's worrying about Dictator: Outbreak is the fact that it quite obviously lacks a soul.

From the second you download the game and hit the play button, to the moment you inevitably lose your grip on all the power you had gained, it's impossible to ignore the title's not so hidden ulterior motives. What does that mean? Well, to put it bluntly, Dictator: Outbreak is a shameless cash grab.

See, unless you're willing to drop some cash, you'll never be able set a decent high score. Your nameless Dictators will rise and fall while Tigrido lines its pockets by treating players to an all you can eat ad buffet. Any money you spend on IAPs will be icing on Tigrido's free-to-play cake.

It's a get-rich-quick scheme built around some shoddy gameplay, which tasks players with maintaining their grip on power by juggling the affections of three rival groups. For all its pomp and ceremony though, Dictator: Outbreak throws meaningless choice after meaningless choice at users until they either pay up, or lose.

ALTO'S ADVENTURE

ENJOY ENDLESS SKIING FUN IN THIS INDIE GAME

You can ride through the snow in the day, or at night. You can ride through the wind, the rain, the setting sun and the clinging mountain mist. You chase llamas that have escaped your farm, bombing down the mountainside, rescuing each one with a satisfying ding. You pay once, for an endless runner, and you won't be able to put it down.

That's right – an endless runner without microtransactions, a licensed mascot, cool-down periods and powerups. What you're getting is a solid game that saves this genre.

Mastering the one-touch mechanic, Alto's Adventure simply wants you to hop over obstacles and time taps to make the most of any momentum you build en route down the mountain. It sounds simple, but the parallax

Left Quarter pipes, ramps and rails to grind on – this game has every kind of surface

Below Complete objectives and unlock a wingsuit that changes how you play mountainscapes in the background, a continual day/night cycle and a plethora of just-about-beatable obstacles makes the game compulsive – the best 'just one more go' runner in years.

To add longevity and an end-game to what could have lost its appeal an hour or so in, you get given macro goals to work towards and an in-game shop to unload all your hard-earned gold. There's depth to this game, hidden behind its wonderful art direction, but once you're in, you'll find it hard to let go of.

Alto's Adventure is proof that there's more to the endless runner than cash grabs.

KING OF THIEVES

A ROBBIN' GOOD PUZZLER?

King of Thieves is fun: you have to fling your little beanbag thief around a cave filled with treasure, hopping over fireballs, dodging buzzsaws and sliding under homing birds (don't ask). The physics are satisfying, the learning curve is instantly graspable, and the level design is as sly as it gets.

That's where the IAPs come in: they weigh down this game, moreso than its peers in the free-to-play market. King of Thieves is obsessed with locks – each level is blocked by a couple of them to start with, but soon you get to the stage where you need to use 20 or so to break into a level. That's all well and good, but the recharge economy for the lockpicks is massively off-kilter from the average player's speed. It's not a matter of being impatient: this game wants to milk your wallet.

And it's a shame, because there are some genuinely innovative ideas in the game – the multiplayer aspect is one of the most satisfying we've come across in an app: you can raid other player's maps (which they design themselves) and take their gems, which tie into a leaderboard. It's an innovative system, it's just a shame you won't be able to enjoy it too much because it's hidden behind a ludicrous, unbalanced IAP system that wants to charge you about £10 per run when you hit level 25.

A genuinely fun and addictive game, but its fingers are always desiring and reaching into your pot of gold.

JOLLY JAM

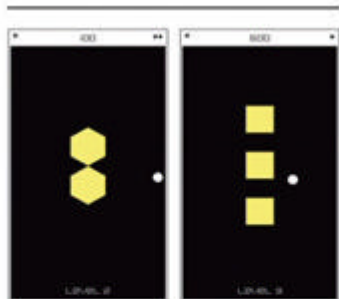

At first glance this game looks like all of the other freemium matching games that are designed to make as much money as possible, but the actual mechanics here are somewhat different. In PolyNoid you have to place lines on the screen to bounce a ball at the right angle to hit targets. It is an incredibly simple idea and one which is quite original, but unfortunately it will either absorb you or get repetitive quite quickly. If you are a skilled game player, the repetitive nature will be apparent, but for children and those who do not play games often, it may find a happy home. CREATE IFTTT RECIPES WITH DO CAMERA

» Make sending and sharing your photos a lot easier and generally more fun with IFTTT's latest recipe-based app

Automation is one of the biggest areas on both iOS and Android platforms that has taken off in the past year. These sort of apps offer users the chance to make using their device simpler and performing mundane tasks a whole lot quicker. At the top of the pile of these apps is the incredible IFTTT app. The app is broken up into different sections that enable users to create 'recipes' from. These recipes will be curated of different functions and apps currently stored on your device. To take it a step further, IFTTT has recently launched an array of new automation apps that link with specified features. One of these apps, Do Camera, is the focus of this tutorial.

As its name suggests, Do Camera focuses on both the front and rear facing cameras on either your iOS or Android device. Users can select from a range of premade recipes to use or attempt to create their own from scratch. What makes the app a must-have automation tool is just how it can expand on what your camera can do to no end; so make sure you download it right away. Once downloaded, it's then a case of experimenting with the various available features and attempting to create a group of well-made and useful recipes that can be shared and potentially downloaded by thousands of other users around the world.

In this tutorial we'll guide you through the process of creating a recipe from scratch purely based around your device's camera functions, as well as show you some of the additional features. If you end up using the Do Camera app a lot, make sure to check out the other Do apps as well.

» FINALISING A RECIPE

● iPad+ | iOS 7.0 | Free | v1.0
● Android | iOS 4.0 | Free | v1.0.3

The Do Camera is very much designed in the familiar IFTTT format, making it an easy place to create camera-based recipes. What makes the app truly great is the scope of premade recipes that are already available, including Android Wear support. However, the app does have its flaws. It can be a little slow to process some of the complex recipes you'll want to create and users can only currently create and store up to three different recipes at one time, which may not be quite enough.

A great addition to the IFTTT stable, and is brilliant for sharing photos but it isn't perfect.

THE TOP 200 GREATEST APPS EVER

I WHY WE LOVE... INSTAPAPER

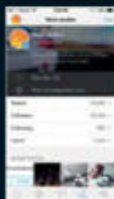

Thanks to the increasing size of our smartphones, the ability to read large bodies of text on your device is now completely viable. To help you with this, Instapaper is a minimalist offline reading app, which enables users to save articles and web pages to an offline playlist and read them at a later date. If you've got any interest in reading, then this is a must-have app.

● iPhone+ | iOS 8.0 | Freemium | v6.1
● Android | OS varies | Freemium | Varies

WHY WE LOVE... TWEETBOT 3

The Apple App Store has a plethora of quality Twitter clients readily available for users to download and enjoy. In our opinion, the best of the bunch has to be the terrific Tweetbot 3 app. It fundamentally includes all the usual features that you would normally have access to in the default Twitter app, but it certainly shines through when it comes to performance. There is also no obvious lag when you are using the app and it's easy to manage multiple accounts.

● iPhone+ | iOS 8.0 | £3.99/$4.99 | v3.5.2
